

✎ In Georgia, it is said, a white man has been sentenced to be hung for the murder of a negro. It must have been a pretty worthless kind of a white man that would receive such a punishment in a Democratic state, but the case will answer as a precedent,—that is, if the ronderer is not finally pardoned.

Ben Wade comes out in a fierce letter, wherein he represents his humble self as "deceived, betrayed, and humiliated" by President Hayes' course, and thinks the president's motives are bad very bad. The president read the letter, politely suppressed a yawn, made an ineffectual grab for an early insect that had settled on his nose, and remarked that fly-time was approaching.

Judge Spofford was last Thursday elected Senator from Louisiana by a almost a unanimous vote. Most of the Republicans voted for him. Warmoth was a self-nominated candidate. He did not get a vote. He accordingly pronounced the Republican party "gone up." It is thought that on this point there is a singular unanimity of view between Warmoth and William P. Kellogg, who was elected senator by the defunct Packard legislature.

☛ The war between Russia and Turkey seems to have begun in earnest. The Russians have crossed the Pruthi, the dividing river between Russia and Roumania, the northern principality of Turkey. The Turks are making preparations to resist the invasion, and it is probable that the Russians will find "the sick man" a hard customer to deal with. What the character of the fighting will be, what the Christian provinces of Turkey will suffer, and what part the other powers of Europe will take can only be told as the contest develops. It seems probable that all will maintain neutrality so long as national interests will permit, as no one of the great powers feels like fighting for others' interests. But it is considered quite possible that nation after nation may be drawn into the war if Russia shows evidence of any designs of conquest or lack of faith in her recent profession in which case this may be the beginning of the greatest war of modern times.

✎ Apropos of the late election trouble in South Carolina and the political bargains of the campaign, we give the record of a parallel case in the same state published in a New York paper in 1801, in which the results of their bargain was not quite so successful as the more recent case. This paper says: "There are gentlemen now in this state from South Carolina who were members and present in the legislature that state when they met in December last to choose electors for a president and who assert it as a fact, publicly, and even mention names, that an offer was made by the Anti-Federal party, at least by as many of them as were the Federalists were amply sufficient to have decided the choice of electors, that they would relinquish Col. Burr if the Federalists would agree to relinquish Mr. Adams, and that the electors should be chosen in the confidence that they would give in their votes for president to Mr. Jefferson and Gen. Pinckney, but it coming to the knowledge of Gen. Pinckney, he instantly gave it his opinion that the offer ought to be and it accordingly was, rejected.

17 The Louisiana problem has passed the first stage toward solution, in a manner not exactly satisfactory, but perhaps as well as could be expected under the circumstances. The troops have been withdrawn by the Federal government, and unsupported, Governor Packard was obliged to surrender. The Packard Legislature went over to the Nicholls Legislature and were received with a reasonable degree of cordiality, certainly with due moderation. The administration recognized neither party, under took to decide nothing, but simply drew back its support of Packard, and the Nicholls Legislature at once became the government de facto, and as such will probably be de jure. We can scarcely expect that the gush and sentiment developed on Monday will continue forever, but so far as it indicates a condition of reconciliation of the discordant elements of Louisiana we may rejoice and it is not unreasonable to expect a permanent improvement in the relation of the two States. At least we may hope so.

From present indications it would seem that the local quarrels will be soon settled, though we can scarcely avoid the feeling that in all probability the negroes will be in a very uncomfortable position for many years to come. But we should not borrow trouble about the future. The course pursued by the president was properly within his discretion, and if he finds the confidence he places in the people of the South is not justified it is still in his power to use the national police to protect the needy and helpless.

an active ally of Russia, for the pride of the German empire is centered upon the belief that the emperor Prince Charles will give Roumanian troops the same fate which will be sealed for all time. The Christian nation of Europe must join to drive the Turks across the Bosphorus.

JEFFERSON, Ohio, April 9.

To U. S. Register, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR:—Your letter of the 5th was duly received. I am glad to know that you remember what I said in favor of President Hayes in my endeavor to procure his nomination at the Cincinnati convention. I do remember it, after which has since transpired, with indignation and a bitterness of soul that I never before.

I am now with what untiring labors for the emancipation of the slaves of the south, and to procure justice for them, before and during the time I was in Congress, and I suppose will continue to do so, and I am glad on this subject. But I have been dis-ceived, betrayed, and even intimidated by the slaveholders. I am glad that I have not language to express this. During the first month of his administration we find him clothed with two of the most malignant enemies of the iron heel of their more hideous enemies that slave-cursed region, and there consulting with those malefactors how best he can put these colored people under the iron heel of their more hideous enemies and reduce them to a condition infinitely worse than before they were free. I feel that to have emancipated these people and that to leave them under the iron heel of their more hideous enemies would have reduced them to slavery who they were free. And for Hayes to do this to the men who had at the hazard of their lives given him the votes which put white men in power would be to give power to do this terrible injustice! No doubt he meditates the destruction of the party that elected him.

With much respect, this fills me with amazement and inexpressible indignation. My only consolation is that history informs me that better men than I ever pretended to be have in like manner been deceived. Some have at times said that "all men are liars," but "all" means well," but hell is paved with such good intentions. Truly yours

B. F. WADE.

Comrades!—Once more the time approaches for us to perform the beautiful but sad duty of decorating with flowers the graves of our "moble dead." You will find that the necessary preparations for the observance of our "Commemorial Day," May 30, 1877, performing the ceremony in your own way, but remember that no soldier or sailor's grave shall be neglected.

I would suggest that when practicable, the school children be invited to participate with you at this time; that they may grow up to revere the memory of those brave men who died that "their nation might live."

Let us not forget while we are cherishing the memory of our "comrade gone before," that their widows and orphans, and our "maimed heroes are left with us, and have a duty to be performed as well as the dead.

Mr. Vennor, the Canadian weather prophet, says the latter part of April and the Month of May will be moon-like a June month, and adds:—"I still hold to my views respecting a cool and wet midsummer, but cannot please myself in forecasting the autumn. There is something positively refreshing in the Associated Press dispatches from New Orleans. They describe how the city fathers have agreed to donate $40,000 of his "Contingent Fund" to pay the expenses of Mr. Packard's policemen, and how the Commission seemed to be highly gratified at the absence of resentment on the part of the Nicholls party; how the Nicholls legislature then proceeded to vote millions and fees to Republicans who "were not returned"; how the Democrats returning Board of Aldermen Democrats "graciously yielded their seats, introducing colored Republican members," and finally, how "Mr. Kild, a colored man, was elected to the Legislature," represented a handsome gold-headed cane, William Ridgeway, a colored member from Concordia, (?) who had been seated session against Senator Woodin and others. Mr. Tweed, in answer to questions, declined testifying, mainly on the ground that he might criminate himself. He was, however, not responsible for the alleged confession. On his "arrival" he sent for his counsel, Mr. Townsend, and told him he had sent word to the attorney-general that he was going, and that he would be ready. He was advised to tabulate his defenses, and he did so with the distinct understanding that no one outside should see it, and that it was to be returned if not approved by the attorney-general. He put it in the hands of a messenger for information as to suits against the city. He had been long enough protecting other people's reputation and position, and he had got all he wanted of confidence. He was not to be deceived by a statement published. There might be con-

THE HIGHEST RAILROAD BRIDGE IN THE WORLD.—The Cincinnati papers are giving accounts of the opening of the new southern railroad from that city to the Kentucky river, where there is said to be the highest railroad bridge ever built. It has three spans, the middle one 375 feet long, and the others 500 feet each, the total length being 1125 feet. There is a bridge in Switzerland which is 354 feet long, and another in the Alps, 325 feet long, and one at Varragus, in the Andes, 292 feet high, with spans 125 feet long. The piers of this Kentucky bridge, except at Brooklyn, are the largest in the world. The middle pier is 117 feet high, and the base of the iron work is 117 by 28. The frame is all wrought iron, and was built out from the abutments towards the centre of each span by the fastening of the junction points. It was accomplished a novel way. One sunny day having expanded the framework, the connecting bolts were fastened, and so much secured; then a second day was spent in contracting the expansion the bridge was capable of, the bolts were made fast permanently.

penalty tone. The effect is seen more especially in breadstuffs, and the market along the seaboard as well as at the inland points. The big wheat harvest, the corn buoyant and prices are going up rapidly.

Dispatches from Chicago, Wednesday report the wheat market as very excited and prices are being made as high as $1.15 per bushel for May and $1.57-34 for June delivery, which is an advance of 4 1/8 cents on the closing rates of Saturday. The market for corn is also very excited and was very marked the same day, wheat was sold at $1.68-1/2 soon after the opening of business. The market for pork and lard is also considerably at a premium. The market for hogs is also very excited.

The gold premium is also stronger, prices having ranged from 107 to 109 1/2.
